

Chops' Interior color pallet with samples from muralist

Bryant Palmer Soto recently completed schematic interior design studies for a new high-end restaurant venture in Torrance regionally known as Chops Bar & Grill and now known as Stanley's. It is a traditional steakhouse with a jazz theme and piano bar. The interiors group hit on the Harlem Renaissance as a point of departure, using WPA era photographs, murals depicting the period, and a transitional art deco pallet with liberal use of wenge wood, ebony, stainless steel and classic white linen. The firm has specified everything for the project, from furnishings and draperies, to table ware and cutlery.
